Fractional CMOs, founders, and investors showing up in the viewer mix is not noise. It is distribution. These are people who advise the exact companies Dreamdata sells to, and they are reading the same content. When they recommend attribution tools, they will remember who they have been reading.

What This Audience Is Telling You

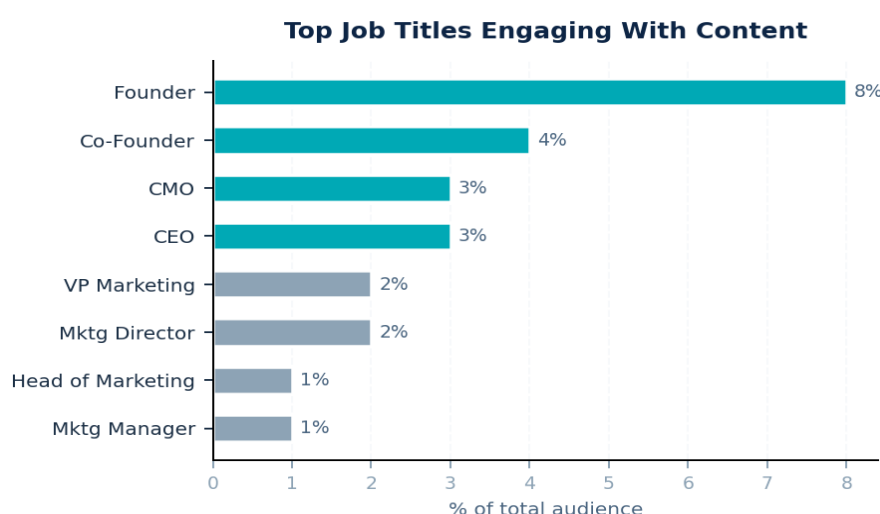

Strategic read — May 2026

The right people are finding the content

18 Tier 1 viewers came to Nick's profile this month: CMOs, VP Marketing leaders, and demand gen directors at B2B companies. Jason Seeba (CMO, OneSignal), Royce Brunson (4x CRO), and Joseph LaCriola (CRO, $100M+ revenue background) do not browse LinkedIn profiles passively. When they visit, something pointed them here. That is attribution working, in the most literal sense.

91.6% of profile reach came from posts, not search

This is the most important number in the report. Search appearances were 522, flat and not growing. Profile appearances from posts were 39,793, up 99% in the past 7 days. The audience finding Nick is finding him through content. Every post is functioning as a discovery channel, not just a brand touchpoint.

The demographic match is strong

Founders (8%), Co-Founders (4%), CMOs (3%), CEOs (3%), and VP Marketing (2%) make up the top five job titles engaging with Nick's content. That is Dreamdata's ICP, not an approximation of it. The content is pulling in the exact seniority level and function that Dreamdata needs in the room.

The ecosystem is paying attention too

Fractional CMOs, VCs, and GTM advisors make up a meaningful slice of Tier 3. These are people who advise and recommend tools to the very companies in Tier 1 and Tier 2. Getting in front of them through content is compounding — every fractional CMO who becomes a fan is a potential referral source.
